

Contents

1. The Post-Cold War Presidential Rhetoric of Foreign Policy Crisis

- 1.1. Conceptualizing Foreign Policy Crisis
- 1.2. Defining Foreign Policy Crisis Rhetorically
- 1.3. Defining Foreign Policy Crisis Rhetoric
- 1.4. Method of Study
- 1.5. Material for and Structure of the Book

2. Context of the Study

- 2.1. Rhetorical Studies in the Communication Field
- 2.2. Presidential Rhetoric Studies in the Political Communication Field
- 2.3. Rhetorical Studies of Presidential Address in the Public Address Field
- 2.4. Situating the Present Study within the Scholarly Conversation

3. George H. W. Bush's Inclination to Use Force and the Crisis in the Persian Gulf in 1990

- 3.1. Introduction
- 3.2. Shaping Rhetorical Action
- 3.3. Defining and Interpreting the Crisis in the Persian Gulf in 1990: Crisis Situationally and Rhetorically Bound
- 3.4. Structuring the Perspective of the Crisis: Purpose as the Dominant Term
- 3.5. Rationalizing the Use of Force: Bush's Mysticism
- 3.6. Promoting the Rationale: Explicit and Antithetical Appeals
- 3.7. Conclusion

4. Bill Clinton's Reluctance to Use Force and the Crisis in Haiti in 1994

- 4.1. Introduction
- 4.2. Shaping Rhetorical Action
- 4.3. Defining and Interpreting the Crisis in Haiti in 1994: Crisis Rhetorically Bound
- 4.4. Structuring the Perspective of the Crisis: Act as the Dominant Term
- 4.5. Rationalizing the Use of Force: Clinton's Realism
- 4.6. Promoting the Rationale: Explicit, Antithetical, and Implicit Appeals
- 4.7. Conclusion

5. George W. Bush's Drive to Use Force and the Crisis in Iraq in 2003

- 5.1. Introduction
- 5.2. Shaping Rhetorical Action
- 5.3. Defining and Interpreting the Crisis in Iraq in 2003: Crisis Rhetorically Bound
- 5.4. Structuring the Perspective of the Crisis: Agency as the Dominant Term
- 5.5. Rationalizing the Use of Force: Bush's Pragmatism
- 5.6. Promoting the Rationale: Antithetical Appeals
- 5.7. Conclusion

6. Barack Obama's Avoidance to Use Force and the Crisis in Syria in 2013

- 6.1. Introduction
- 6.2. Shaping Rhetorical Action
- 6.3. Defining and Interpreting the Crisis in Syria in 2013: Crisis Situationally Bound
- 6.4. Structuring the Perspective of the Crisis: Agent and Scene as the Dominant Terms
- 6.5. Rationalizing the Use of Force: Obama's Idealism and Materialism

- 6.6. Promoting the Rationale: Explicit, Antithetical, and Implicit Appeals
- 6.7. Conclusion

7. Donald J. Trump's Restraint to Use Force and the 2019-2020 Persian Gulf Crisis

- 7.1. Introduction
- 7.2. Shaping Rhetorical Action
- 7.3. Defining and Interpreting the 2019-2020 Persian Gulf Crisis: Crisis Rhetorically Bound
- 7.4. Structuring the Perspective of the Crisis: Scene as the Dominant Term
- 7.5. Rationalizing the Use of Force: Trump's Materialism
- 7.6. Promoting the Rationale: Antithetical and Implicit Appeals
- 7.7. Conclusion

8. Use of Force Rhetoric in the Post-Cold War Era

- 8.1. Shaping Rhetorical Action
- 8.2. Definition and Interpretation of Foreign Policy Crisis
- 8.3. Structuring the Perspective of Crisis
- 8.4. Rationalizing the Use of Force
- 8.5. Promoting the Rationale
- 8.6. This Study's Findings in the Context of Past Research
- 8.7. Crisis Rhetoric and the American Presidency
- 8.8. Conclusion

Reference list