

Contents

A note from the Author

I. Introduction

- I.1. The assumptions and the aim of the dissertation
- I.2. Spatial and chronological range
- I.3. History of the research on the Funnel Beaker culture in Ukraine
- I.4. The status of research studies

II. Natural conditions in the development of the Funnel Beaker culture

- II.1. The natural environment
- II.2. Reconstruction of the natural environment during the period of the Funnel Beaker culture development
- II.3. Natural resources

III. Description of sources

- III.1. The source database
- III.2. Evaluation of the source database

IV. Geographical and settlement analysis

- IV.1. Spreading of the Funnel Beaker culture in Ukraine
- IV.2. Analysis of settlement locations in relation to natural environmental conditions
 - IV.2.1. Settlement and types of topography, direction of exposure and altitude
 - IV.2.2. Settlement and types of parent rock
 - IV.2.3. Settlement and river network
 - IV.2.4. Settlement and natural resources
- IV.3. Conclusions about settlements

V. Analysis of settlements forms

- V.1. Settlements
 - V.1.1. Location
 - V.1.2. Systematics of features
 - V.1.2.1. Houses
 - V.1.2.2. Storage pits
 - V.1.2.3. Kilns
 - V.1.2.4. Defensive constructions
 - V.1.3. Flint-processing workshops
 - V.1.4. The size of Funnel Beaker settlements
 - V.1.5. The inner layout of settlements
 - V.1.5.1. The house and its surroundings (household)
 - V.1.5.2. Development of the space within settlements
- V.2. Camps
 - V.2.1. Open camps
 - V.2.2. Cave camps
- V.3. Graves
- V.4. Collective deposits
- V.5. Single finds

VI. Remarks about the chronology of Funnel Beaker settlement in Ukraine

- VI.1. Zymne, the “Horodyshche” site
- VI.2. Kotoryny, site Horodyshche III

- VI.3. Lezhnytsia, the “Chub” site
- VI.4. Rudnyky, the “Monastyryshche” site
- VI.5. Mali Hrybovychi, the “Chorna Hora” site
- VI.6. Vynnyky, the “Lysivka” site
- VI.7. Summary

VII. Synchronization of the Funnel Beaker with the Trypillia culture

- VII.1. Imports of the Trypillia culture vessels at the Funnel Beaker settlements
- VII.2. Funnel Beaker pottery in the Trypillia culture environment
- VII.3. Summary

VIII. The relations between the Funnel Beaker and the Corded Ware cultures

IX. Remarks about Funnel Beaker economy in Ukraine

- IX.1. Animal remains
- IX.2. Plant impressions
- IX.3. Traces of anthropogenic changes in the natural environment. The example of the upper Dnister basin
 - IX.3.1. Geomorphological studies
 - IX.3.2. Palynological studies
- IX.4. Economic usefulness of the environment – the territory exploited by the settlement
- IX.5. Tools
- IX.6. Summary

X. Afterword

- X.1. Conclusions 9
- X.2. Final remarks

XI. Bibliography

Catalogue of Funnel Beaker sites from Ukraine – CD

Contents

A note from the Author

I. Introduction

- I.1. The assumptions and the aim of the dissertation
- I.2. Spatial and chronological range
- I.3. History of the research on the Funnel Beaker culture in Ukraine
- I.4. The status of research studies

II. Natural conditions in the development of the Funnel Beaker culture

- II.1. The natural environment
- II.2. Reconstruction of the natural environment during the period of the Funnel Beaker culture development
- II.3. Natural resources

III. Description of sources

- III.1. The source database
- III.2. Evaluation of the source database

IV. Geographical and settlement analysis

- IV.1. Spreading of the Funnel Beaker culture in Ukraine
- IV.2. Analysis of settlement locations in relation to natural environmental conditions
 - IV.2.1. Settlement and types of topography, direction of exposure and altitude
 - IV.2.2. Settlement and types of parent rock
 - IV.2.3. Settlement and river network

IV.2.4. Settlement and natural resources

IV.3. Conclusions about settlements

V. Analysis of settlements forms

V.1. Settlements

V.1.1. Location

V.1.2. Systematics of features

V.1.2.1. Houses

V.1.2.2. Storage pits

V.1.2.3. Kilns

V.1.2.4. Defensive constructions

V.1.3. Flint-processing workshops

V.1.4. The size of Funnel Beaker settlements

V.1.5. The inner layout of settlements

V.1.5.1. The house and its surroundings (household)

V.1.5.2. Development of the space within settlements

V.2. Camps

V.2.1. Open camps

V.2.2. Cave camps

V.3. Graves

V.4. Collective deposits

V.5. Single finds

VI. Remarks about the chronology of Funnel Beaker settlement in Ukraine

VI.1. Zymne, the “Horodyshche” site

VI.2. Kotoryny, site Horodyshche III

VI.3. Lezhnytsia, the “Chub” site

VI.4. Rudnyky, the “Monastyryshche” site

VI.5. Mali Hrybovychi, the “Chorna Hora” site

VI.6. Vynnyky, the “Lysivka” site

VI.7. Summary

VII. Synchronization of the Funnel Beaker with the Trypillia culture

VII.1. Imports of the Trypillia culture vessels at the Funnel Beaker settlements

VII.2. Funnel Beaker pottery in the Trypillia culture environment

VII.3. Summary

VIII. The relations between the Funnel Beaker and the Corded Ware cultures

IX. Remarks about Funnel Beaker economy in Ukraine

IX.1. Animal remains

IX.2. Plant impressions

IX.3. Traces of anthropogenic changes in the natural environment. The example of the upper Dnister basin

IX.3.1. Geomorphological studies

IX.3.2. Palynological studies

IX.4. Economic usefulness of the environment – the territory exploited by the settlement

IX.5. Tools

IX.6. Summary

X. Afterword

X.1. Conclusions 9

X.2. Final remarks

XI. Bibliography

Catalogue of Funnel Beaker sites from Ukraine – CD